Dear Remington,

I purchased this gun new approximately nine years ago. It has had Four to Five boxes of shells shot through it at the most and has been properly cared for.

This gun has gone off three times with me, of its own accord. Not only is this nerve racking and dangerous but it has cost me the trophy of a lifetime.

I have owned a host of Remingtons through the years and still have several. This gun was the purchase of a lifetime for me. My first impulse was to get rid of this gun and every other Remington that I own. To say that my confidence has been shaken would be an understatement. Whatever happens I doubt that I will ever feel comfortable hunting with this gun again.

After giving this some thought I didn't want to inflict this upon someone else and felt you should know about the problem I am doing this for your benefit as well as the safety of others.

Here is what has happened in the deer stand:

Game appears, I push off the safety and squeeze the trigger but it won't pull. I check the safety and squeeze the trigger again and it still won't pull.

I eject the shell, upon injecting the next shell the gun goes off as the bolt is closed.
