

Return please.
and copy to me.
I'd be interested in
copy of your reply.
Thred.

641 E. 4th Street
Boysertown, Penna.
10 May 1963

Remington Arms Company, Inc.

Firearms Plant

Ilion, New York

Dear Sir;

Upon reading the April 1963 American Rifleman I stopped at page 59 with the Bushnell advertisement. Your new handgun the .221 Fireball XP100 caught my eye. Finally I had a close look at this masterpiece in page 13 of the May 1963 American Rifleman. Congratulations on an excellent idea in pistols! I do, however, have a few questions.

Your advertisement states that the gun fits either right or left hand, but since most people are right handed why not put the bolt on the left side? This would eliminate changing hands or crossing over for each action.

Is it not also possible to modify this weapon so as to be clip fed? I realize your company has much experience in firearms, but I'm looking at this gun from a practical viewpoint. I am an avid gun enthusiast and a high school science teacher interested in the development of better firearms, and therefore I am curious about your product.

Sincerely yours
Laurie W. Schlegel