A couple of things.

- 1) I made some changes to slide (2) – some commas, word changes, nothing content-wise but I literally got paid to copy edit for a living, so I'm very thorough. I also added a "the" to the Leupold paper. I have attached both as v 1.
- 2) You can PDF both a ppt and a word file to answer Bob's question. If you don't know how to do it (an I assume you do), then tell me and I will get it done.
- 3) You only have one picture of the system (I don't count the exploded view). Is this by design? Don't you want to include some other views? Even if they are just CAD drawings, I think it will be very valuable for people to see the stock fold, see some key features (3-lug bolt?), etc. If there is a reason you didn't include more, then so be it. There are some great pictures from a ppt that Brent sent me in March that conceptually show the system from a lot of angles and I think it would be valuable to spread them throughout.
- 4) Do they really need assembly/disassembly instructions before they get the gun? This is three slides of drivel to someone who doesn't have his hands on the system unless you are trying to demonstrate how easy it is to take it apart and put it back together. Again, this might be more useful if you pasted some diagrams/pictures in so that someone could see what you were talking about.

Tell me if there is anything I can do to help. I didn't cc anyone else.
