
From: Nickerson, Ken E.
Sent: Thursday, December 21, 2006 5:01 PM
To: Johnson, Rick W.
Subject: RE: New triggers
Attachments: image001.gif

Rick,

I have taught one 700 class for BORTAC this year to test our new 700 Armorer's school. In the school we will be teaching them how to replace and adjust the triggers and if they replace it with the new style trigger how to modify the stock. My understanding is that all 700 are moving to the new trigger style in 07 which I am in favor of because it eliminates the possibility of FSR. I believe the biggest battle we have in the sniper community today is the trigger safety concerns.

From: Johnson, Rick W.
Sent: Thursday, December 21, 2006 4:42 PM
To: Cockman, Mark T.; Nickerson, Ken E.
Subject: RE: New triggers

Ken please copy me on your response on this Thanks---RWJ

From: Cockman, Mark T.
Sent: Thursday, December 21, 2006 1:41 PM
To: Johnson, Rick W.; Nickerson, Ken E.
Subject: New triggers

Folks are calling me, and I'm referring them to Ken for the following.

Some of them have been to recent armorer schools where they have been told they can buy the new trigger and put it in their guns. On the LE side we have not been informed of anything about this new trigger, none of us have seen it, let alone fire it. I was told it couldn't just be slapped into an existing 700 without stock modification.

If this is true, it might need to be clarified at the schools. LE hasn't been told whether they are getting 40X triggers in LE guns in 07 or this new trigger –

Food for thought as I run away

Mark

Mark Cockman
Western U.S. LE Specialist
(801) 561-1967 Office
(801) 233-8354 Fax
(801) 520-3575 Mobile
www.RemingtonLE.com