I have a model 700 BDL SS in a .270. When I chamber a shell the bolt QUOTEdecocksQUOTE itself as if you have pulled the trigger to release the firing pin if the safety is on fire, if I open the bolt and put the gun on safe before I cycle a shell then the gun will stay cocked. But when the safety is pushed to the fire the gun will fire! This is extremely dangerous. I love the gun and shoot it well but what can I do to fix it before I get hurt or hurt someone or something? I took the gun apart and cleaned it and noticed some surface rust on the two screws on the front of the trigger mechanism. Twice the gun has fired unexpectantly luckily no one was hurt but I now have a hole in the eve of my house. Thanks Dave
