Dear Mr. Hale,

We cannot alter it to a non-electronic fire control.

The rifles are not available but the ammunition and primers are available. Unless you wanted to purchase another Etronx rifle you should not feel taken.

I want to thank you for being so understanding. The fact is there are no primers available, locally, on a regular basis, but that's ok.

My love of Remington dates back to my Great Great Grandfather, I have his Remington side-by-side Damascus 12 ga. That trust and love is now gone.

I don't have any recourse, but to write letters to the print media detailing the problems I've encountered. I believe that there are a number of us with the same problem.

A dialogue on the "net" might help, I don't know?

We have a local news program called "Get Ghedhart" that is broadcast in at least 5 states, if his research finds it as hard as I have to find primers and or ammunition, I'm sure he won't have any problems with the story. I guess, last of all, the State of Utah has very strict "lemon laws", and it seems to me that a "Brand New Remington Rifle" that can't be fired probably meets that definition, don't you?

Again, I want to Thank you for your very kind help in resolving this problem.
