My rifle recently discharged as I flipped the safety off. My first thought was that I must have had my finger on the trigger (still set at the original factory pull), even though I am pretty conscious about safety, but then a hunting buddy mentioned something about a recall or safety modification that he had read about in the local newspaper regarding similar situations with the Model 700 rifles. He knows of at least one other person who has had this happen with their Model 700 Needless to say, I am now concerned about using my rifle. Any service bulletins or information that I should know about?

Thanks...Bill Zobel
