Dear Mr. Duplichan,

Thank you for your inquiry. According to the information provided, this firearm was manufactured in or around 1971. We do not have any specific details on older model firearms. If it has a hinged floorplate or detachable magazine it may be the BDL, if not it is probably the ADL.

We are offering a Safety Modification Program on certain bolt action rifles including older model 700's. This is a voluntary program, it is not a recall. This is designed to remind people of the existence of the bolt-lock feature and to offer customers the opportunity to modernize their products. We strongly recommend that you take advantage of this offer if you have a bolt lock safety.

You can read more information regarding our firearms and our Safety Modification program through the front page of our website or the link below:

The safe use and performance of your firearm depends on correct assembly and routine maintenance, as well as adherence to the "10 Commandments of Firearm Safety." <http://www.remington.com/support/10comm.htm> It is critical that you familiarize yourself with the information in both the owners manual and safety booklet. Whether you are a veteran shooter with a collection of Remington firearms, or a first time shooter, take the time to review this important literature and be certain that you are practicing firearm safety!

I purchased this rifle about 30 ? years ago. Can you tell me the manufacture date, approximate retail cost when purchased, cost to replace it with a similar Remington ? Is it a BDL or ADL ? As I recall one was more expensive; was that the BDL ?

Thanks.
