Dear Mr. Hammer,

Thank you for your inquiry and support of Remington products. Model 700's made before 1982 did have a bolt lock exactly like you described. However, due to liability issues, we no longer make guns with the bolt lock and can't make that kind of alteration.

Is there a way to have the bolt lock when the safety is on? I know quite a few hunters and military / LE "professionals" who won't use a 700 action because of the possibility of the bolt opening (either slightly or completely) while moving through rough country. If there is not a way to do so, this could be something to consider for improvement.

Please advise.
