Remington Arms

Dear Madam/Sir,

Approximately ten years ago, I purchased a Remington 700, BDL, 30.06 cal. rifle, and I have always been satisfied with its performance. I've hunted with excellance, and have grown very fond of it. I also own other Remington's, and again I have always been satisfied. However, this past month while practicing I came across a problem. I chambered a round and fired my first shot with no problem, thereafter, the second round, I chambered, closed the bolt, and after taking my saftey off, the cartridge fired. I am sure the trigger was not touched. Fortunitely, always being aware of saftey precautions, no one was hurt.

Following this incident, I brought the rifle to a local Gun Smith, and to the best of his knowledge, he found no fault in the rifle's mechanics. However, I am still weery of using this rifle again, in the case of a reoccurance.

I would be gratefull if you could examine my rifle, and correct any problems you may come across.

Sincerely,

Nicholas Moccia
