

A couple of my friends suggested I should write to Remington about this safety feature and who knows, they might send you the gun you have been looking for as a token of appreciation for your suggestion, because it could save them millions in damage suits. I replied, I don't look for that to happen, but, I'd be tickled if they did, but, I've always preferred Remington over the others and I'd like to see them change that feature. I can't see where it serves any purpose at all and it makes the gun more dangerous than it needs to be.

Some people I've talked to over the years told me that is the reason they don't like Remington Bolt Actions and choose Winchester because of the safety.

Please consider it. I know you will see a big difference in safety and in sales.

Sincerely,

Kenneth E. Smith
