

Remington Arms Co.
Attor: Jim. Stekl,

Approximate 7-8 years ago I went deer hunting and after zeroing in on a deer, I squeezed down on the trigger and nothing happened until a couple of seconds later the gun fired. Naturally I was off the target by then.

I took the gun to a gunsmith who said the problem was probably caused by using WD-40 to lubricate it. He disassembled the bolt and cleaned it with solvent and lubricated it.
