Dear Sir:

On March 20 I watched CBS WCAU TV station 60 Minutes. A segment of this program was on guns which were unsafe, because they misfired. One of the guns was your 700 Remington rifle.

I purchased a Remington 700 BDN in 65-66 years ago. I happened to be unloading this rifle when I was deer hunting. It is the practice to take no loaded guns into our cabin and I was unloading the rifle outside of the cabin. It just happened that this rifle fired prematurely while unloading it. No way was the trigger touched.

Now I haven't deer hunted for years and I don't think this rifle has been fired since the time I just mentioned. In fact after seeing 60 Minutes, it scares me!

After watching CBS 60 Minutes I say you have a problem here with this rifle. Now it, usually, is the practice when a manufacture has a defect in their product they make a recall to amend the situation. Just what is Remington Arms Co. doing to remedy this defect in their 700 rifles?
