DEAR Remington,

I'm sure that you folks have heard you're share of tales - I've grown up in and been in the auto business for quite a few years now and I know that sometimes it's hard to tell if a customer is confused or mistaken. (or just crazy). For years now I thought that an incident that occurred with the enclosed Rifle was impossible, but I realized ~~that~~ the other day that I was not mistaken.

Years ago, as I sat in a deer stand outside of Uvalde Texas and watched the sun set, I heard my dad + two brothers approaching in the Jeep to pick me up. The enclosed rifle was laying in my lap with a shell bolted into the chamber and the gun on safety. You can imagine how surprised I was when I flicked the safety forward enable me to work the bolt + thereby eject the shell --- when the safety clicked forward the gun fired.

As you know, when a 30-06 goes off while lying in your lap while sitting in a deer stand, it gets your attention. Fortunately, no one was hurt, and except for a small hole in a deer stand - no damage was done.
My dad always contended that I must have pulled the trigger, but I always knew that I didn't.

Two weekends ago, on a Sunday afternoon, myself and two friends went to another guy's house to "sight in" our rifles. I had received a Christmas gift last year a new Redfield rifle, and my ^(enclosed) gun had only been bore-sighted.
I sat at the rest-table, bolted in a shell, aimed at the bullseye 100 yds away, and fired. We could not see with our spotting scope that I had hit the paper. I ejected the spent shell and out of habit closed the bolt and put the safety on. Four guys including myself walked to the target, which I had missed completely. We all agreed to walk back towards the rest-table 25 yards, and then shoot at the paper from 25. (3)

Perhaps I am elaborating this whole story a little much, but I would like for Remington arms to know that this time, when I moved the safety forward, four guys heard the gun dry-fire.

Of course the gun was not pointed towards anyone, but if there had been a shell in the chamber, it would have fired.

I promise you, I did not touch the trigger What I would like is for Remington to fix this gun for me. Please call me if there is no problem found, so that we can work to a fair solution before you return the gun to me. I believe that Remington is a fine company manufacturing fantastic products. I have another Remington rifle - (a 300 Savage) so I want Remington to take all the time you might need to correct the problem. Please call at 1-800-564-4193 with any questions.

Happy Holidays
