Perry,

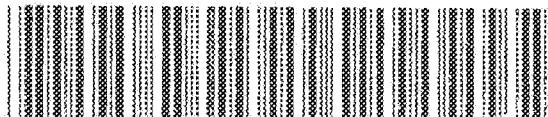

After loading 4 rounds in the magazine I placed the fifth round on top of the magazine and slowly pushed the bolt forward to chamber the round with out pulling a round from the magazine. When the bolt was closed I locked it into place. After firing the first round I unlocked the bolt and attempted to pull the bolt to the rear, it would not move at first after applying more force it moved to the rear and the round ejected. I attempted to push the bolt forward. It moved half way then got extremely tough to close. I checked to make sure there was nothing obstructing the bolt and found nothing. It eventually closed and locked. I fired that round and during bolt manipulation the same thing happened as the first. After chambering that round I placed the weapon on safe and moved to the next firing position. I fired two more rounds with the same thing happening during bolt manipulation as the previous two rounds. After firing both rounds I managed to chamber the last round, placed the weapon on safe and moved to the next firing position. While moving the chambered round discharged into the ground. My hand was outside and in front of the trigger guard, there was nothing obstructing the trigger and the weapon was on safe. After ejecting the last round and making the weapon safe, the casing was checked and it showed that the primer was struck.
