I have sent you two questions and you keep asking if I want a response to my question and I keep responding yes, but you don't send me the answer, you just keep sending me the same form when can I expect to see an answer?

To whom it may concern,

I bought a Model 7 350 Rem Mag from the Custom Shop.

I got it out of my Gun Safe yesterday to let a friend of mine shoot it.

He got the gun set up on the bench rest and we both got a surprise when he took the safety off and the gun fired.

Needless to say he was none too happy, especially with the chunk of meat he was missing out of his thumb.

I accused him of having his finger on the trigger when he pushed the safety off.

He assured me that this was not the case.

So I took the rifle and chambered a round.

I pointed the gun to the ground pushed the safety off, and yes it fired, and yes I have a chunk of meat missing from my thumb.

You can stop laughing, it really is not funny.

Thank God we both know how to handle a gun safely.

After giving my friend a band aid and placing a band aid on my thumb to stop the bleeding, I loaded the rifle with a fired casing and tried to get the gun to replicate what it had done with a live round in the chamber.

The gun did not malfunction, and no, I am not going to place another live round in the chamber to see if it is going to fire again when I push the safety off.

Number one, I do not trust this gun and number two, I need to know how to ship this gun back to the Custom Shop for repair.

The gun does have a scope on it and I really do not want to remove it.

Please advise on how you want to handle this issue.

Sincerely,

E. Bruce Clevenger
