Gentlemen: I have one of your

221 Fireball Pistols. I believe your description of it says the action is held solid in the stock. This one rests only on the end of the lug on bottom of receiver and by taking the end of forearm in one hand and end of barrel in the other there is considerable play between them. And I find there is a plastic washer between the end of the lug and the ~~stock~~ stock where the lug rests. Is this pistol supposed to bobble around on the end of the lug like that? If so I would like to know ~~if~~ how it can shoot straight
