The Model 700 ADL and Model 7 rifles shown at this week's Operations Committee meeting were very impressive. Planning, designing and bringing these guns into production was a difficult and challenging assignment, particularly with the time constraints we set. I know this has been a team effort and want you to know that we recognize the efforts and talent of those involved.

The way things look, there's going to be no shortage of challenges in the next few years. This job is a solid indication that we're equal to the task.
