State of Our Marketplace Industry Trends

HUNTING LICENSE SALES

While the most recent numbers released from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service show that the total number of hunting license sales have declined over the last several years, hunters are contributing more dollars in pursuit of their sport.

In fact, comparing the two most recent years' gross dollar contributions from hunters shows an increase of nearly 3% to a total of $723,712,681.

Since 1939, in special taxes paid only by hunters and shooters, over $4 billion has been contributed toward conservation.

Even today, the hunter remains a social and economic necessity.

Long-term trends

In the last decade the number of paid hunting license holders has hovered around the 15 million mark. The next several pages that follow detail these trends and provide a more accurate picture.

The industry has witnessed a stabilization since the mid-seventies and early eighties. At the same time the total gross contributions from hunters continued to increase on average 4.1% per year over the last twenty years. Changing social and economical demographics indicate that this stabilization may continue.

HUNTING LICENSE HOLDERS IN RELATION TO U.S. POPULATION TRENDS

HUNTING LICENSE HOLDERS AS A PERCENTAGE OF THE U.S. POPULATION

POPULATION DYNAMICS EFFECTING HUNTING TRENDS

In the previous page we noted that the U.S. population is growing as the number of paid hunting license holders slowly declines.

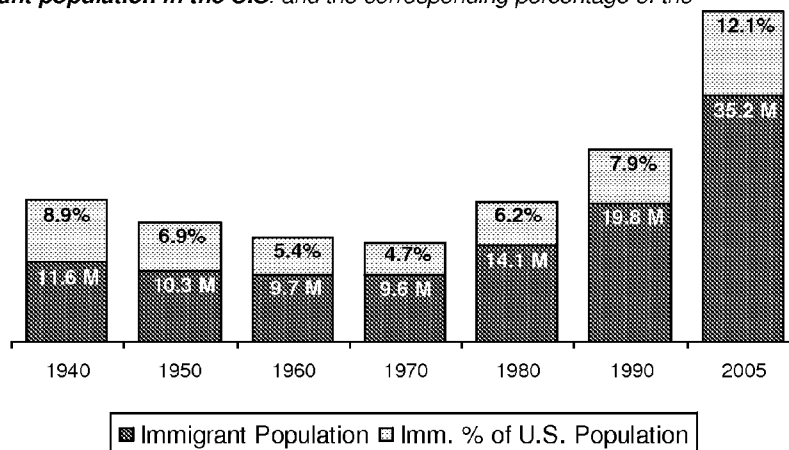

Our opponents would target this as dissatisfaction with the sport however larger socio-economic variables are the root cause for this trend.

In one case we see the Baby Boomer Generation (those born between the years of 1946-1964) which explain the rise in hunting licenses purchased in the late seventies and early eighties. During the peak (around 1980) these individuals were between the ages of 16-34 – the ideal hunting age. Currently this generation is between the ages of 43-61 where drop out rates (as in any sport) increase.

Another population dynamic that must be factored is the large surge in immigrant population (a non-traditional hunting audience). This surge explains the huge increase in population numbers and a lower overall percentage of the total population that hold certified hunting licenses.

The graph below displays the immigrant population in the U.S. and the corresponding percentage of the population.

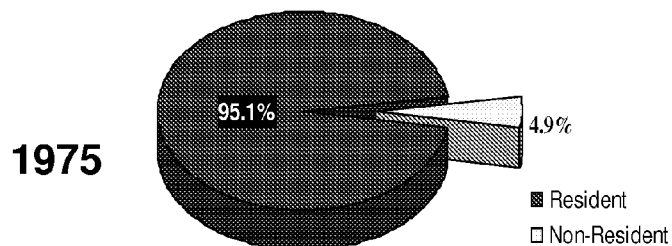

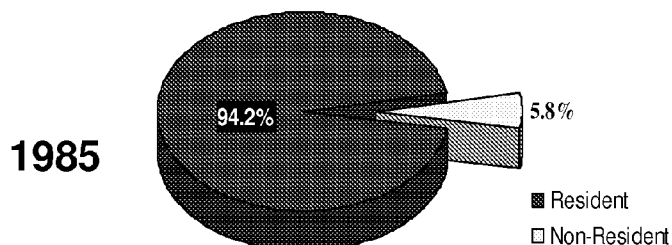

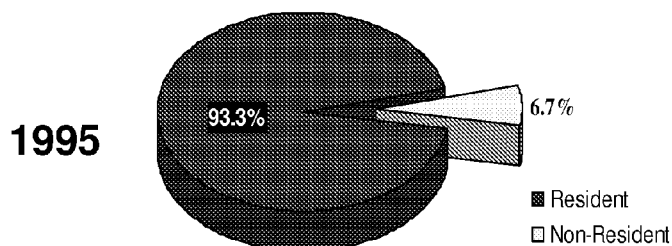

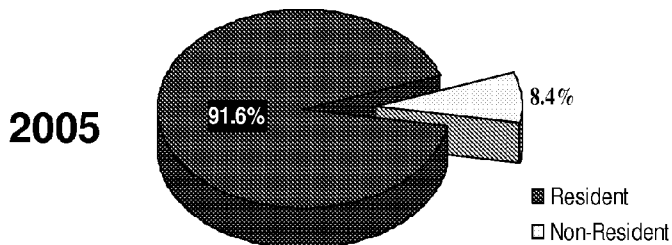

Since the 1970's the immigrant population has more than tripled. The pace of growth is very high by historic standards. Currently 12.1% of the U.S. population is foreign-born - higher than at any time since the 1920 Census. This huge spurt in population growth puts the decline in the number of hunters in a better perspective.

RESIDENT / NON-RESIDENT HUNTING LICENSE TRENDS BY STATE (20-Years)(The table below provides a quick reference for state specific resident / non-resident license trends over the last two decades).*

RESIDENT: 24,618,619
NON-RES: 1,284,483
TOTAL: 25,903,102

Long-term Trends:

In the past 30 years the ratio of non-resident hunting licenses, tags, permits and stamps as a percentage of total purchases has increased by more than 70%; from 4.9% of total purchases in 1975 to 8.4% in 2005. This activity indicates a greater mobility of hunters in pursuit of their sport.

According to the latest statistics available, 84% of hunters hunt in-state only, 11% hunt in-state and out-of-state and 5% hunt out-of-state only.

HISTORICAL EXCISE TAX TRENDS (1982-Present)

Tax Collections on Firearms & Ammunition (2005 Calendar Year)

- $105.6 million collected on long guns
- $47.3 million collected on handguns
- $71.3 million collected on ammunition
- $224.2 million TOTAL

Excise taxes are paid by the manufacturer of firearms and ammunition. After these taxes are collected, they are apportioned to the states by the Federal Aid program governed by the Pittman-Robertson Wildlife Restoration Act.

State agencies gain access to these funds through grants that help restore wildlife and habitat, acquire land, educate hunters and reach new participants.

Declining Firearm-related Injuries

Over the last decade, the number of fatalities involving firearms (excluding homicide and suicide) has dropped by 40 percent.

This decline is attributed to a number of factors including free firearm locking devices shipped with new firearms, industry-supported firearm safety education programs like Project ChildSafe,® and educational efforts by groups like the National Shooting Sports Foundation and the National Rifle Association and state-affiliated hunter education programs as well as technological advances in firearm designs and manufacturing processes.

Firearm-Accident Fatalities See Largest Decline

Compared to other principle types of unintentional fatalities in the United States, firearms has had the largest percentage decrease in the past decade.

| TYPE                     | 1995          | 2005*          | % CHANGE      |
|--------------------------|---------------|----------------|---------------|
| Firearms                 | 1,225         | 730            | down 40%      |
| Fires, Flames, Smoke     | 3,761         | 3,100          | down 18%      |
| Motor Vehicles           | 43,363        | 45,800         | up 6%         |
| Ingestion of Food/Object | 3,185         | 4,600          | up 44%        |
| ALL TYPES       | 93,320 | 113,000 | UP 20% |

Other injury type comparisons are not available because of changes in year-to-year classifications.

- Firearm-related fatalities in the U.S. have been decreasing consistently since record keeping began in 1903 and dramatically in the last 10 years.

- Over the last nine years, the number of unintentional firearm-related fatalities for children (14 years of age and under) has decreased by 69 percent.

- Accidental firearm-related fatalities are substantially lower compared to the number of accidental deaths caused by other injury types.

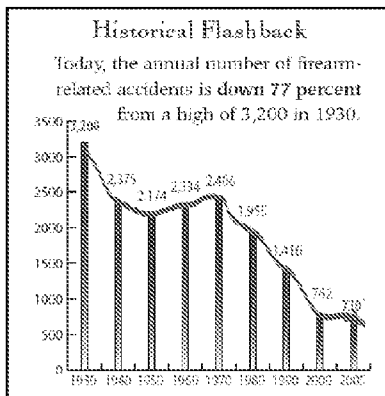

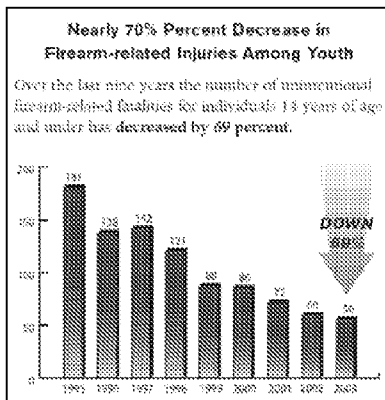

- Hunting is one of the safest forms of recreation in the United States.

- Firearms are involved in fewer than 1.2 percent of accidental fatalities among children (14 years of age and under).

- In the past 10 years, firearm-related accidents in the home have dropped by more than 44 percent.

- Firearms are involved in fewer than 1 percent (0.7 percent) of all accidental fatalities in the United States.

- Over the last decade the rate of firearm-related injuries per 100,000 people has declined by 60 percent (from 0.5 percent in 1995 to 0.2 percent in 2005).

Range Consumption Reports:

Like any other business, ranges need information that will help them gauge their performance against the industry. These quarterly reports are designed to measure key consumption variables based on surveys of ranges nationwide.

THE HUNTER AND CONSERVATION

INTRODUCTION

Today, millions of Americans, young and old, male and female, have developed an interest in conservation and wildlife. Many of these people realize and appreciate the role of hunters in the development of conservation and wildlife management in our nation. But many do not. That's why this information is important today.

FACTS ABOUT WILDLIFE

- Some people oppose hunting because they feel that by preserving wildlife, it will increase. Wildlife, however, is a resource that cannot be stockpiled. If any annual overabundance of game is not harvested, nature often takes over in a cruel and harsh way.
- Weather, more than any other factor, often decides the fate of wildlife. Just as wildlife will flourish under ideal weather conditions, mild winters and bountiful springs, the opposite is true when the seasons are harsh.
- In a harsh winter, when an oversized white-tailed deer herds deplete all available food, merciless death by slow starvation is inevitable. Predators attack the young and hunger-weakened stragglers. Disease and parasites add to the toll. Most often, the end result is weak, unhealthy herd with far fewer deer that would be present if hunters and taken a reasonable surplus in the fall.

- Research shows that a healthy white-tailed deer herd, reasonably sized to make the most of available habitat, can be reduced each year by as much as 40 percent with no ill effect on future population. Hunters in most states rarely take more than 15 percent of the herds. Yet, if left alone, a white-tailed deer herd can double in size in only two years, quickly deplete available food supplies and face certain mass die-offs.
- It is apparent that hunting is a useful part of today's wise game management practices. By teaming habitat improvement with carefully regulated hunting seasons and bag limits, our professional conservationists make sure that hunters take only the surplus of game populations.
- Today, all 50 states have a well-organized wildlife conservation agency, financed primarily by hunters and anglers, for the protection and management of wildlife.

MONEY FOR CONSERVATION

The cost of managing our wildlife is extremely high, with hundreds of millions of dollars spent each year. Here, once again, the hunter enters the picture because, unlike other state governmental agencies, the 50 fish and game departments receive little support from taxes paid by the general public. Instead, the majority of their operating funds come from hunters and anglers. Sporting enthusiasts are pay- ing, as they have for many years, nearly all the bills for practical wildlife conservation—and paying them not just for their own benefit, but for that of all Americans.

Dating as far back as the 1920s, sportsmen and women have paid the lion's share for conservation. Through license fees and special excise taxes on hunting and fishing equipment, they currently contribute more than $4.7 million each day for the benefit of wildlife.

The knowledge of how this money is gathered and how it is spent contributes greatly to an understanding of the overall conservation picture — and the hunter's important place in it:

- License fees are the largest portion of the sportsman's contributions to the state fish and game departments, presently furnishing them with more than $1.1 billion per year.
- The purchase of a hunting license—whether by a hunter or non-hunter—is one of the best contributions that can be made today for conservation.
- A milestone in conservation history occurred in 1937 with the passage of the Pittman-Robertson (PR) Federal Aid in Wildlife Restoration Act. This legislation transferred receipts from a 10 percent excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition from the general treasury to state wildlife conservation programs.
- This tax was raised to 11 percent during WW II and now yields $163 million per year for wildlife conservation programs.
- In 1970, the Dingell-Hart Bill was enacted, making a 10 percent excise tax on handguns available for wildlife restoration and hunter safety training. Proceeds from this tax provide some $41 million per year.
- The archery community entered the picture in 1972 with the passage of the Dingell-Goodling Bill, specifying an 11 percent excise tax on archery equipment. The proceeds, which now amount to some $25 million per year, are also used for wildlife restoration and hunter safety.
- A similar levy on fishing equipment contributes some $100 million a year.
- All proceeds from these excise taxes are divided among the 50 state wildlife agencies. Each state's share is based on its land area and number of licensed hunters and anglers. Funds cover about 75 percent of the bill for approved wildlife and fish restoration projects and total some $560 million per year.
- The combination of these three taxes has formed one of the best programs ever devised for the benefit of wildlife, game and non-game species alike, and has enabled the states to greatly expand their conservation activities.

- An important stipulation of the Pittman-Roberson Act is that proceeds may not go to any wildlife agency that turns over any P-R revenue to other state programs. This has prevented a number of state legislatures from diverting funds provided by hunters and anglers into their general funds.
- In order to remain eligible for P-R funds, a state must employ trained wildlife specialists. This has encouraged many universities to introduce courses in wildlife management and related biological studies.
- More than half of the revenue generated by the P-R Act is used to buy, develop, maintain and operate wildlife management areas. These include planting feed and cover, restocking game, constructing marshes and ponds for waterfowl, and providing watering places for wildlife in arid areas.
- Another major use of these funds is research, which contributes to sound wildlife management and disease control.
- Almost every one of the 50 states has used P-R funds to obtain a total of some four million acres for wildlife refuges, wintering range, wetlands and public hunting grounds – more than the total acreage of the state of Connecticut.
- It is important to realize that land acquisition from taxes on sporting arms and ammunition provides the non-hunting public as well as the hunter with state-owned recreation grounds.

! = sample size too small to report reliably (25 or less)

NOTE: The U.S. total does not equal the sum of state data as economic activity across state borders are not included in the state totals, in addition to other factors.

NOTE: The expenditures reported above are greater than those reported by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Sportsmen often attributed purchases to both fishing and hunting (especially vehicles and big-ticket items). These items were not included in the Service's hunting expenditure estimates. Such items were included above by prorating each item's cost based on each respondent's total days of hunting and fishing activity.

NOTE: The U.S. total does not equal the sum of state data as economic activity across state borders are not included in the state totals, in addition to other factors.

NOTE: The expenditures reported above are greater than those reported by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Sportsmen often attributed purchases to both fishing and hunting (especially vehicles and big-ticket items). These items were not included in the Service's hunting expenditure estimates. Such items were included above by prorating each item's cost based on each respondent's total days of hunting and fishing activity.

Shooting Sports Participation

The Importance of Syndicated Research Studies

There are two ways to measure industry variables.

Section A presented quantifiable measurements that are tracked for the most part, annually. These include license sales, excise taxes, production figures, background checks, imports and exports etc. In most cases there is an agency or an organization responsible for gathering, tabulating and verifying the data. These variables tell us a lot about how our industry is performing. But at the same time they also leave gaps in identifying who is actually behind the numbers.

Sections B and C present another way of measuring the industry. Through research studies and national surveys. Just as there are agencies measuring quantity there are a number of reliable research firms serving our industry that help us determine who is participating in the shooting sports in terms of demographics, how frequently they are participating and how much they are spending in pursuit of their sport. This information when used together with the data presented in Section A will give you a complete picture of the industry.

The following participation and demographic statistics presented are based on annual, random sample surveys.

Because the population is often too large for researchers to survey all of its members, in this case everyone who participates in the shooting sports, a small but carefully chosen sample is used to represent the population. The sample reflects the characteristics of the population from which it is drawn. Sampling error is the degree to which a sample might differ from the population. When inferring to the population, results are reported plus or minus the sampling error.

A word of caution when using survey data.

Year-to-year changes in the number of participants may be due more to survey fluctuation than actual trends. It is best to use the participation and demographic studies for long-term comparisons, such as every five years or as a general barometer.

Preserve hunting is on the rise due to the convenience and ease of participation.

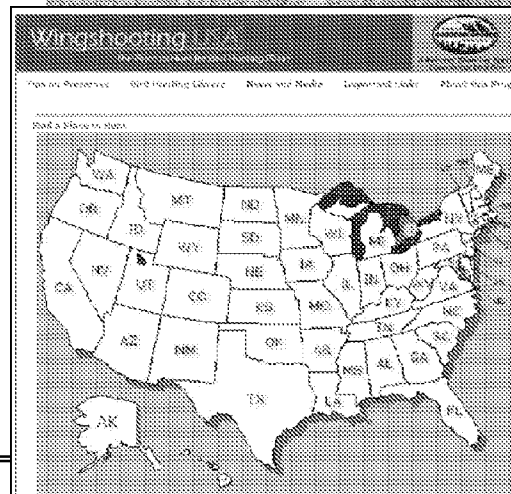

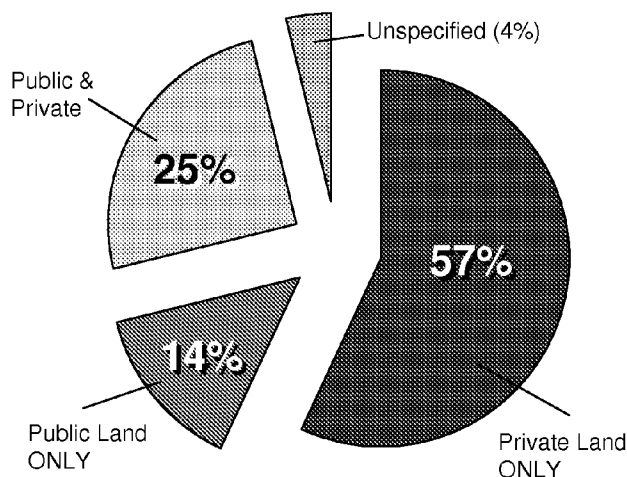

Nationally, over half (57%) of hunters hunt on private land exclusively. Slightly over one in ten (14%) hunt on public land only and a quarter hunt both private and public land.

Depending on the type of game hunted, the percentages increase:

* Big game hunters: 72% of hunting days (110 million days) are spent on private lands.

* Small game hunters: 70% of hunting days (42 million days) are spent on private lands.

* Migratory bird hunters: 67% of hunting days (20 million days) are spent on private lands

RANGE CONSUMPTION REPORTS

Like any other business, ranges need information that will help them gauge their performance against the industry. Range Consumption Reports will help them do just that. They are quarterly reports measuring key consumption variables based on surveys of ranges nationwide.

"Consumption" refers to end-user services. Every range could benefit by this type of information. The information is 100% free to all ranges that participate in the quarterly surveys.

NEW ITEM!

THE REPORTS MEASURE VARIABLES SUCH AS:

- ✓ Average price charged per round
- ✓ Number of rounds sold per hour
- ✓ Number of targets thrown
- ✓ Overall performance (rounds sold including extra charges)
- ✓ Number of indoor/outdoor shooting facilities available
- ✓ Average price charged per hour
- ✓ Frequency of customer reviews
- ✓ Number and types of programs available at the range
- ✓ Maximum shooting distance
- ✓ Number of frequency of competitions

...AND MORE!

This means that a range simply fills out a quick survey each quarter. The results are aggregated with hundreds of other ranges across the country. The information supplied by the range remains absolutely confidential. In exchange for participating, the range is sent the report each quarter. From there they can compare their response to the industry.

Participating Ranges/Shooting Facilities.....FREE
Non-participating ranges/shooting facilities.....N/A

Business Data like this does not exist anywhere else.
It is an exclusive service of the NSSF/NASR for all range types: indoor, outdoor, public and private.

CUSTOMIZED MARKET REPORTS

NSSF Customized Market Reports are tailor-designed templates prepared specifically for your trade area.

Why is C.M.R. Important?

Studies show that retailers and ranges who have a better understanding of their trade area are more likely to customize their marketing and advertising campaigns specifically around their target audience.

These targeted campaigns have a much higher success rate in reaching the right types of customers.

WHAT DOES C.M.R. INCLUDE?

Trade Area Intelligence

- ✓ Knowing Your Customer Potential
- ✓ Knowing Your Competition
- ✓ Knowing Your Market Revenue
- ✓ Detailed Demographic Report
- ✓ Household Report
- ✓ Income Report
- ✓ Thematic Maps of Your Trade Area

Member price .....$45.00
Non-member price.....$125.00

The information in these reports will aid you in building well- targeted marketing efforts that will ultimately improve your business.

EXPANDED!

Need a demographic? Now you can order a demographic report (without a full C.M.R.) for your trade area. This includes a "Demographic Detail" report within a 1-5-15 mile radius of your location. Only $25.00 per location.
