Near Remington Arms,

I have had BDL Remington, 25.06 gun that I bought from you back in the mid-80's. It is equipped with a 199 Rem-rod of the same year.

This has always been my "old faithful" whitetail/mule deer gun, it has put many deer on the ground. It has always been reliable.

But, this year I crawled across a fence about 12 miles South of Pagu Springs Colorado. After crossing the fence and getting situated I loaded my rifle and when I closed the bolt, it decapitated a small pine tree above me. After sitting down from the unexpected shot and the color came back. I unloaded the clip. I dry fired it about 8 or 10 times not closing the bolt, not even touching the trigger. If you remove the bolt and put it on safety it wouldn't discharge as you closed the bolt.

After the boom dry fires it quit doing it and resumed normal operation and has worked fine every time since. But, you know I will never be able to trust that gun again. Is there anything that can be done to insure that this problem will not reoccur? Please Respond.

Thanks

A Life Time Remington Shooter
