

On Sunday morning November 14th 1982, I came off the deer stand and due to the high wind ^{wind-8} I pulled my pickup inside my farm shop and stepped outside the pickup with the rifle and instead of walking outside as I should have I attempted to eject the live ammo while standing by the pickup still aware the rifle might accidentally fire and carefully pushed the safety forward. The rifle fired into the concrete floor. Thus eliminating any question that the first discharge was anything other than a malfunction of the rifle.

I'm not making any liability claim for the damaged engine or the damage to my shop floor.
I do wish to have the rifle replaced without cost.
