

700 ADL Centerfire Remington

Discussion Thread

Response (Chris)

1/30/2004 11:41:20 AM

Dear Mr. Rose,

Thank you for your patience. Models produced since the early 1980's will not have a bolt lock. This enables the shooter to open the bolt and unload with the safety on. It has not been recalled. We feel that being able to unload the firearm with the safety on is a much safer situation than having to put in on fire to open the bolt and unload.

Safety comes first with firearms in any situation. To view our safety section of this site, go to:

<http://www.remington.com/safety/safety.htm>

Customer (Michael Rose)

1/25/2004 1:08:20 PM

Are the bolts warrantied or recalled when they come back when the gun is on safety? Should this be happening or not? If this is not right, how do I submit the bolt for repair?

Thanks for your help.