

THUMBHOLE SLUG GUN VERSION OF MODEL 11-87™ DELIVERS PRECISION ACCURACY AND LESS RECOIL

Madison, NC – Joining the highly functional line of Special Purpose field guns, Remington is pleased to introduce the Model 11-87 SP (Special Purpose) Thumbhole Slug 12-gauge autoloading shotgun. This fully rifled, magnum (2³/₄ or 3-inch) shotgun is designed to deliver rifle-like precision with today's high performance sabot slugs in the softer-recoiling, reliable Model 11-87 platform.

This Model 11-87 SP features a well-designed black laminate, thumbhole stock with comfortable roll-over style cheekpiece, palm swell and wide fore-end for steady handling and controlled shot placement. The heavy contour, fully rifled 21-inch barrel has a cantilever mount for the easy addition of optics and all exposed metalwork features a durable black matte finish. Like all Remington® Model 11-87 autoloading shotguns, this Special Purpose version features a patented gas-operating system for reliable feed and function with the benefit of reduced felt recoil. The unique thumbhole-style stock design provides for quick handling, steady shot placement and further reduction of recoil. Equipped with the revolutionary R3® recoil pad, this 12-gauge magnum shotgun reduces the “punch” of the hardest-hitting slugs by over 30%. Rear swivel stud, magazine cap swivel stud and padded nylon sling complete this solidly built autoloader.

The Model 11-87 SP Thumbhole Slug gun delivers accuracy, reliability and effective on-game performance in an easy-handling package. Available at a suggested retail price of $985.
