Dear Mr. Dabkowski,
Thank you for your comments and support. As with any firearm, proper maintenance and following the 10 commandments of safety are most important. We appreciate your attention to detail on cleaning your firearm and suggest having your firearm regularly serviced and maintained by a qualified gunsmith. We appreciate your input and support of Remington Arms.

Dear Sir,
As for the Model Sp-10, unfortunately we do not offer a rifle sight barrel for this shotgun. We appreciate your support.

Dear Sirs, I had to send my response to you about a CNN News story that aired a couple of days ago. the story revolved around your model 700 BDL firing when the safety was taken off, which resulted in a death. Years ago I purchased my current model 700 BDL 30.06 from a co-worker who was frightened to death of it because it fired when he chambered a round. I purchased it for $200.00, WHAT A BUY!! A friend and I field stripped the rifle and found a 1/16th inch of hardened grime between the trigger mechanism and the sear. This did not allow the mechanism to fully engage when the bolt was cocked, and the mechanism was teetering until the slightest movement caused it to fire! We cleaned the caked up grime out(probably from years of use) and the rifle has performed flawlessly since!!! I seriously doubt that many people clean the trigger mechanism periodically, and this will lead to a bad situation. You made a fine rifle, but like everything else in todays world, its hard to dummy proof a product. A chambered weapon should always be in a safe direction regardless! I sent you an E-mail earlier, but I messed up my E-mail address(My wife uses the Computer,I usually avoid it) Please continue to make fine american firearms, and do not let the liberal press distort your fine record! Sincerely, Larry Dabkowski

P.S I am still waiting your answer on whether you offer a 10 ga slug barrel with sights for your 10 ga magnum shotgun?
L.Dabkowski sincerely,
