I purchased my Father a Model 660 in 1971. He used this weapon for years successfully harvesting many Pennsylvania Whitetail Deer. Before he passed away he gave me back this gun. I continued hunting various game throughout North America with this weapon. Over the past five years I have not been able to hunt much due to work. Now I have started to become an active hunter once again, but much to my dismay not only do you not offer the 350 Magnum in any current production models you no longer produce factory ammunition. You not only killed production of a fine cartridge you also killed many hunting memories that this weapon carries for me of my father. Remington has left a small but loyal group of 350 Magnum fans out in the cold. Thanks for letting me vent my frustrations.
