Customer (paul asby) 11/29/2004 10:32:56 PM
i have just bought a remington model 721 in 3006 caliber with a 22 inch barrel & no "hump" where the rear sight rests by the serial # i think it was made in 1958.
my question is do i need to send the gun back to you to have the safety fixed as it is a pre 1982 model & i know that there has been several cases where the firearm discharged while it was being unloaded, or do i take it to a good gunsmith?
i would like the bolt to open while the safety is on if that is possible.

thank you
