When the safety is on if you try to pull the trigger it allows the trigger to move. It does not drop the firing pin all the way but does make a clicking sound. When you put it back to safety position the safety lock does not go back to the proper position. When you pull the trigger mechanism out to see what is going on it shows that the safety mechanism is dropping past the catch. If you then pulled the safety to fire and then pushed it back to safety it does NOT relock in the safety mode. We are concerned because we purchased for our grandkids and we don't know if this is normal or if we need to have it looked at.
